ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This edition of the directory could not have been written without the cooperation of the sawmill operators and loggers listed within.

Thanks must also be extended to the Department of Environmental Management Foresters and various private consulting foresters operating throughout the Commonwealth. Their assistance was invaluable in compiling the information contained in this directory.

INTRODUCTION

For more than three centuries, people have harvested trees from Massachusetts forests and manufactured them into boards, dimension stock, and timber. Approximately 100 million board feet has been harvested annually for the past 10 to 15 years. In response to an increasing demand for wood in the last three years, the timber harvest in Massachusetts has approximately doubled.*

It is necessary, periodically, to inventory the primary processing facilities (sawmills) and to tally up the number of loggers who supply them with new materials taken from the forest. Such an inventory was completed in the summer of 1979 and cooperatively compiled by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Management and the Massachusetts Cooperative Extension Service.

The information included was gathered to meet the needs of three groups. They are:

- people who have timber to harvest.
- people who have harvested timber to sell.
- people wanting to do business with a sawmill.

The directory was revised to include marketing information that will facilitate transactions between these groups.

In addition to reflecting the expected changes in the industry itself, such as companies entering and leaving the market, this directory provides more information than previous editions. Information on sawmills covers:

- the mill's production range.
- the kind of species cut by the mill and their percentage contribution to the mills' total output.
- the types of residues the mill produces.
- those firms that "custom saw."
- mills that have a planer, a dry kiln, pallet mill, or box shop.
- special products or services offered by a sawmill.

*A normal distribution was assumed for each production class. The mean of each class was multiplied by the number of mills within that class. The result indicated that sawmill output was approximately double that of previous estimates.

The loggers are classified as follows:

- i. Independent: loggers who purchase their own stumpage and sell logs or other forest products.
- c. Contract: loggers who work by the job piece cutting timber belonging to someone else—either the timber owner or the mill.
- g. General: loggers who operate in either of the above categories.
- f. Loggers that occasionally cut and sell cordwood.

Loggers are listed by county according to their business address. They are listed alphabetically by last name or business name.

Private consulting foresters are listed alphabetically by last name. The services they offer are indexed by group headings.

Explanation of Sawmill and Loggers List

A sawmill is defined as a plant producing lumber or other forest products from logs. As indicated in the introduction, this edition of the directory marks a departure from the traditional design of this book. Obviously, some changes have occurred in the format of the sawmill and logging list. The following explanation outlines the changes that have occurred.

For sawmills:

- The eleven production classes are assigned the letters A through K.

a = 0-249 MBF
b = 250-499
c = 500-749
d = 750-999
e = 1000-2999
f = 3000-4999
g = 5000-7499
h = 7500-9999
i = 10,000-12,499
j = 12,500-14,999
k = 15,000-and over

The species groups are:

- Eastern White Pine
- Other softwoods (hemlock, spruce, larch, balsam fir, red pine, pitch pine, poplar)
- Oaks (all oaks)
- Soft hardwoods (red maple, paper birch, butternut, basswood)
- Other hardwoods (cherry, hickory, ash, birch, sugar maple, yellow birch, black birch)

The products and services available from the mill are shown.

- "X" indicates that products or services are available.
- A blank space indicates they are not.

Several firms throughout the state have products or services that are not common to sawmill operations. The abbreviations used to represent these products or services are as follows and appear in the 'specialties' column:

BM Bark Mulch
GL Grade Lumber
GS Grade Stakes
HH Hammer Handles
LH Log Homes
LT Landscape Ties-Dipped
PS Portable Sawmill
R Rollers
S Siding
SH Small Lot Harvesting
SM Shingle Mill
TT Table Tops
PT Bridge Planks and Timbers
OT Other

NOTE: The sawmills are assigned to counties according to the business address of the operation; the sawmills are listed alphabetically according to the name of the company or the owner of the mill.

Both logger and sawmill lists now include the phone number of the business and the names of contact people within the company. In addition to the lists of sawmills, loggers, and foresters, the directory includes a list of the Massachusetts pallet manufacturers and the technical services available from governmental agencies and private organizations.

For the landowner interested in harvesting his timber for the first time, there are also sample bid proposals and suggested contract forms.

As the price for timber rises steadily and the sources of easily accessible good quality timber diminish annually, wood-based companies are being forced to seek out suppliers in unfamiliar markets. The intent of this directory is to ease this search as much as possible. Enough information is included to characterize companies, but, hopefully not so much that the directory is confusing or difficult to use. If there are any questions, please contact your nearest Cooperative Extension Service office or regional office of the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Management.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

The business of growing timber and the business of utilizing and marketing it are related in several ways. A timber crop of high quality always has a market at a high price, while an untended crop will be of low to mediocre quality and value. Both production, conversion knowledge and skills are brought to bear on final production values. These values reflect all the way back along the line in prices paid at any given point of production. Thus, it is important that the best possible technical assistance be sought and used.

To fill this need, the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Management maintains a staff of publicly employed foresters whose services are available upon request within certain limitations. For requirements beyond these limitations (which have to do primarily with the amount of time that can be given to any one individual), there are also commercial consulting foresters, both individual and institutional. Listings follow of both public and private consultants who can provide information on the many varied aspects of multiple use management of forest land.

The Sawmill Division of the Industry

The 1980 commercial mill population is 161, down from 177 in 1977. Despite the smaller number of mills the total production has increased to approximately 200 million board feet, up from 90 million board feet sawn in 1977. The demand for native lumber has increased in the past three years and is expected to increase, especially in light of the rising relative price of lumber imported into the region from the West and South. This trend should continue due to the higher transportation costs of the imported lumber. In the foreseeable future, with proper forest management, producers of native lumber should be able to enjoy the advantage of their proximity to Eastern markets in the form of higher demand for their product.

The directory was intended to complement the Massachusetts Directories of Secondary Wood Users and should be of assistance in the marketing of primary forest products by providing information on potential markets.

This directory was designed to consolidate into a single listing the most relevant characteristics of each operation. For example, as the cost of energy increases daily, wood residues are becoming an attractive alternative energy source, so information indicating potential sources was included. The special services and products offered by each operation are also listed.

The Logging Division of the Industry

There is, of course, a close relationship between the sawmill operator and the logger. Some sawmill operators have their own logging crews, and operate them as an integral part of their sawmilling enterprise. A further study of the sawmilling business will be required to show the total picture in this regard. With few exceptions the current, and earlier, inventories dealt only with loggers that are not integral parts of the sawmill enterprise. The following table gives a good idea of the numbers of logging operators, and of their distribution throughout the state. The numbers given are based on the type of logging crew; they do not show total employment or relative size of operation.

Loggers should be given special attention when considering the future of the entire forest-based industry. As good forestry practices prevail, this group will be crucial in efforts to capture the maximum value in a tree or timber stand, and in speeding up the process of integrated utilization. This will be good for the timber landowner, because he should receive more for his harvest under this system. It will be good for the sawmill operator because it will assure him the proper character of raw material, and it will be good for the logger, for it will assure him stable employment and a good return for his work.

estimated _____ thousand board feet, designated by _____ Forester, by paint spots at breast height and on the stump, on a portion of the seller's property described as follows:

(TRACT DESCRIPTION)

Only marked trees will be taken, and the purchaser will pay as liquidated damages three times the stumpage value for any unmarked trees cut, provided that he will not be liable for this penalty in felling certain trees when making necessary roads and skidways in locations approved by the seller.

- Stumps must be cut low, but leaving the paint mark showing, generally not to exceed 10
(ten) inches in height, and trees must be utilized in their tops to a reasonably small diameter.
- Unmarked trees and reproduction will be protected against unnecessary damage during logging, and woods roads and streams will be left clear of brush and tops.
- Skid roads will be kept to a minimum number, and where there are any deep rutting or erosion problems, they must be put back into reasonably good condition before leaving this job.
- The purchaser shall have the right to enter upon the above described property for the purpose of cutting and removing said timber. Likewise, the seller agrees that the purchaser may use necessary equipment to conduct the job of cutting and skidding the timber.
- The purchaser may construct logging roads of ingress and egress and rollways for the purpose of transporting logs from the above described property, so long as they are reasonable and approved by the seller.
- The purchaser must abide by the Forest Fire and Forest Cutting Practices Laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, which includes procuring a Timber Harvesting License.
- The purchaser agrees to conduct the cutting and logging upon said property with as much care as possible and in a proper, customary, and workmanlike manner, doing as little damage as possible, and leave no unnatural debris at the end of the operation.
- No liability shall be attached to the purchaser for any damage which may be said to be customary in logging and milling of timber.

- The seller agrees that he has ownership and the right to sell the timber marked or shown for cutting.
- Title to all timber remains with the seller until paid for, and no cutting may be initiated until timber is paid for in full.
- The purchaser shall be deemed an independent contractor and shall comply with all federal, state and local laws and regulations, and in no way will the seller be responsible for any unlawful acts or injuries committed by the purchaser.
- Any logs, equipment or material left upon said described property after the expiration of this agreement or sale shall become the property of the seller.
